By Appointment.

St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell The mediæval Gateway of the Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem is the only relic left of the half military, half monastic Priory founded in 1100 but suppressed by Henry VIII. Royalty, however, retained the buildings until they were blown up by Protector Somerset and the materials used to build his palace in the Strand, 1549. The Gate as we see it was built in 1504 and bears the arms of the Prior, Sir Thomas Docwra. In a printing office housed here, Dr. Johnson worked as editor of the "Gentleman's Magazine."
